

DEATH OF MRS. A. H. WOOD.

Boston Daily Globe (1872-1922); Nov 8, 1891; ProQuest Historical Newspapers Boston Globe (1872 - 1925)
pg. 12

DEATH OF MRS. A. H. WOOD.Great Loss Sustained by Prominent Savin Hill Family.

Mr. Alexander H. Wood of Savin Hill, and head of the firm of Wood, Pollard & Co., has the sincere sympathies of a large circle of friends, who are deeply pained to hear of the great loss he has sustained by the sudden death of his wife last Friday night. Mrs. Wood was a young woman of remarkable strength and grace of character, and her untimely death takes from her husband and children a most devoted wife and mother. She leaves three children, one a baby born shortly before her own death, and three step-children, to whom she had greatly endeared herself, and by whom she will always be remembered with affectionate tenderness. While Mrs. Wood was a domestic woman, whose life was chiefly centred in the home to which she brought so much happiness, she was known to a large social circle in Dorchester, and highly esteemed for her invariably kind and sympathetic nature. The funeral will take place from the residence of the family at Savin Hill on Tuesday next at noon.